W.J. MALONEY PLUMBING HIRES MARTINKOVIC AS SAFETY DIRECTOR

W.J. Maloney Plumbing Co., Inc. has announced that it has hired Valentine “Skip” Martinkovic as safety director. He will be responsible for overseeing safety programs in all aspects of W.J. Maloney’s projects, including risk management programs, safety in hiring procedures and visiting job sites to assess and improve working conditions, as well as scheduling and training programs for the company.

Prior to his position at W.J. Maloney, Martinkovic was regional safety director at Opus West Construction in Phoenix, where he oversaw safety and environmental management programs locally and regionally for high-rise office, industrial, retail, multi-family, government and institutional sites.

Martinkovic earned a bachelor of science degree in natural resources – soils and water from the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point. He is certified in environmental and emergency management, evaluating high hazards and controls, storm water compliance management, fork lift safety and is an OSHA construction outreach trainer.

A native of Wisconsin, Martinkovic lives in north Phoenix.
